Breaking records

Schoolchildren celebrate as the Personal Bests athletics finals saw more than 1,000 individual records achieved HACKNEY Marshes was awash with record-breakers as schools across the borough took part in the Personal Bests finals.

More than 300 schoolchildren entered the athletics event, which gave them the chance to beat their personal bests across a number of disciplines including shot put, discus, javelin, triple jump, long jump, speed bounce and relays, while also competing at borough level.

Pupils from a total of 19 schools set 1,110 personal bests. Helping out on the day were 28 young sports leadership students from

Winchester, which has adopted the programme following its success in Hackney. For more info and pictures turn to pages 8-9

2012 JOBS UP FOR GRABS

THOUSANDS of job opportunities in the lead up to and during the Olympic and Paralympic Games are set to be advertised over the next seven months.

Promotional events are due to take place in Hackney and the five other host boroughs this autumn. The first takes place at St John's Church, E5, from 10am-5pm, on 28 September, where residents will be able to register their interest in jobs in security, catering, hospitality, retail, customer service, cleaning and waste management.

Hackney's own 2012 jobs brokerage, On Site, will be there together with Jobcentre Plus, and 2012 employers and training providers, who are offering Games-related 'skills for employment' courses. Residents will be directed to the right sector for their experience, advised on opportunities, or offered one-to-one advice.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games said: "This is a unique opportunity to become part of a team that will deliver the biggest event East London has ever seen. Although most of the jobs are temporary, lasting up to nine weeks, it will boost peoples' job prospects to be able to say they were part of the 2012 Games."

Former ambulance driver and Hackney resident, Stephen Yoxall, 57, has been working as a security officer on the Olympic Park for nearly two years, thanks to support from On Site and Job Centre Plus. He said: "I was very grateful for the opportunity to get back to work after two years unemployed. I've seen the Park change from a building site to nearly complete. My ambition after the Games is to go into corporate security."

Twenty four residents have just been offered jobs with the 2012 security firm G4S, but many more are needed.

EastEnders move scrapped

The Olympic Broadcast Centre was a potential new home for hit BBC soap EastEnders

PLANS for the BBC's EastEnders studios to move to the Olympic Broadcast Centre in Hackney Wick have been derailed, despite a last-minute intervention from the Government and the Mayor of London.

Detailed negotiations between the broadcaster and the Olympic Park Legacy Company (OPLC), supported by Hackney Council, would have seen the interiors of the famous long-running soap recreated within part of the International Broadcast Centre (IBC) after the 2012 Games.

A southern section of the huge building would also have been rebuilt to accommodate the Albert Square outside lot.

The negotiations, which had also included the possibility of other parts of the BBC's operations moving to the site, appeared to be abandoned at the time of going to press however, despite pressure from Jeremy Hunt, Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, and the Mayor of London, Boris Johnson.

“Surely the BBC can send EastEnders to the East End”

Jules Pipe, the Mayor of Hackney, said: “I’m extremely disappointed that the BBC should walk away from something that seemed so close to happening.

“Negotiations have been going on for nearly a year and the OPLC has done a terrific job to meet all the BBC’s financial and production requirements.”

The soap’s studios, along with its technical and support crews, would have been the first to move in and would have been the anchor tenant of the IBC, which was designed to be a future hub for Hackney’s fast growing digital and creative industries.

Potential aircraft noise from any future expansion of City Airport disrupting outside shooting has been suggested as the reason for the BBC abandoning the plan at the last moment.

Mayor Pipe added: “As far as we are concerned, the noise issue was successfully dealt with each time it was raised. Executives at the very top of the BBC have repeatedly told me they wanted to make this happen, so it appears that the move has been scuppered by resistance to change from within the corporation.”

Previous governments have used negotiations over the licence fee to encourage the BBC to regionalise its production base.

Mayor Pipe said: “If Dr Who can be based in Cardiff and all the sports staff are in Salford, surely the BBC can send EastEnders to the East End.”

The OPLC are confident, however, that if there is no change of heart at the BBC, an anchor tenant will be found for the Centre from among the many other expressions of interest.

A spokesman said: “Over the past year we have been engaged in the market for the future uses of the Press and Broadcast Centres to ensure a great legacy for the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park and its surrounding communities.

“The BBC is one of the organisations we have been in discussion with and we have done a significant amount of work to meet their needs and production requirements. Ultimately this is a decision for the BBC.

“There is a huge amount of commercial interest in the Press and Broadcast Centres and we intend to formally go out to the market in the autumn.”

A spokesperson from the BBC said: “We had some exploratory talks but it turned out that it wasn’t a viable option so there are no plans to move the show for the foreseeable future.”

Lordship North estate residents get into the swing of things by celebrating the estate's new play park with a fun day

Message from the Mayor

Post-riot picture

THE Government has just released national and regional arrest figures following last month's riots.

It's still early days, but it is beginning to show a picture of who was involved, which will help inform all the work underway both nationally and locally to establish the causes of the disturbances which happened throughout the country.

Important details about the 168 arrested so far in Hackney are that around a third did not live in the borough, and more than three-quarters were adults. There has been speculation in the media linking the outbreaks of disorder to gang activity. While it's true that some of those arrested in Hackney had links to local gangs, and that nationally 73 per cent of those brought before the courts so far have criminal records, there is no evidence the riots were actually caused or orchestrated by gangs.

Time will tell if there was any role played by gang culture, but the causes of the riots were many and complex and need to be properly understood if we are to prevent similar problems in future. Police estimate there are about 200 people connected to gangs in Hackney at the moment. This small proportion of people has a high impact on people's sense of safety.

The Council knows how highly gangs rate on residents' list of concerns, which is why we are so committed to tackling this problem. We recently funded an 18-month police operation to take out middle and top-tier gang members, which resulted in 39 people being charged. Our youth services work closely with the police to intervene directly, and successfully, with the younger people involved in gang activity, or at risk of becoming involved, to move them away from a criminal life.

This work, combined with other factors such as the massive improvements in school standards, is having an impact. The number of young Hackney people in the youth justice system has fallen from 649 in 2007/08 to 340 in 2010/11. The numbers are still too high, but things are moving in the right direction.

Although Hackney Council will face significant funding challenges over the coming years, I am committed to ensuring this work continues, for the sake of our young people, and for the safety and security of the whole of Hackney.

Life of the party

A NEW play area has opened on a Hackney estate to bring fun and games to residents' doorsteps.

The site on Lordship North estate includes swings, a slide, climbing frame, and plants donated by London Wildlife Trust.

The play area has brightened up a unused corner of the estate. The project was funded by

Hackney Homes and Lordship North Estate

Tenants and Residents Association (TRA).

Residents celebrated its official opening with a fun day and barbecue on 10 September, organised by the TRA with support from Hackney Homes. Additional sponsorship came from the Sainsbury's community programme.

Resident Philomena said: "This is a really good way of bringing the community together and involving the children."

The play area was officially opened by Rupert Tyson, chair of Hackney Homes' Board, who described such facilities as 'the lifeline on local estates'.

Other unused parts of the estate have now been turned into community spaces including an 'edible' community garden, bike enclosure and wildlife area.

Hackney's easy riders

A LIMITED number of free places for motorbike and moped training are up for grabs.

Anyone who lives, works or studies in the borough is eligible to attend a BikeSafe or ScooterSafe Rider Skills course, funded by the Council's road safety team.

Designed as an introduction to advance riding skills, the practical course is run by the Met Police. The aim of the one-day course is simple:

to help you enjoy safer biking. Also, by attending the course between 1 September and 30 November, students will automatically be entered into a competition to win a motorcycle or scooter, or runners-up prizes of protective clothing and helmets.

There are a maximum of 1,000 places available on these courses, which are booked on a first come first served basis, across London.

To attend, call Sandra Agbabiaka on: 020 8356 8364; or e-mail: sandra.agbabiaka@hackney.gov.uk

FIRST TIME BUYER APARTMENTS NEVER LOOKED SO GOOD

WOODBERRY PARK, MANOR HOUSE N4 2BP

Stunning new apartments with spectacular views over London are now within the reach of first time buyers at Woodberry Park, N4 2BP. Here, Genesis has just unveiled a fantastic collection of one, two, three and four bedroom homes, some of which have breathtaking views towards the City of London and Canary Wharf while others look out onto the tranquil landscaped courtyard.

Available through shared ownership, buyers can purchase between 25% and 75% and can increase their share at any time, all the way to 100% and outright ownership. Woodberry Park is available to anyone who does not already own a property and is unable to buy a home on the open market. Their total household income must be less than £60,000 per annum and ideally they must have savings of around £3,500 to cover moving and legal costs.

PRIME LOCATION

Woodberry Park enjoys a prime location on the banks of the New River and West Reservoir with sailing, nature trails and an abundance of wildlife. Once complete the development will see over 4,600 new homes created on a 26 hectare development area - forming one of the UK's largest estate redevelopment projects.

Matching the quality location, the interiors are designed to a superior standard. Dramatic floor to ceiling-height windows with stylish glass and steel balconies and paved terraces ensure you enjoy as much time outside your new home as you do inside.

Every aspect of Woodberry Park has been considered to bring style, comfort and convenience to your life.

The contemporary bathrooms are fully tiled with co-ordinated ceramic floor tiling. All kitchens contain Indesit appliances including a fridge/freezer and washer/dryer. For security and peace of mind, each apartment also features an electronic audio door entry system.

GREAT CONNECTIONS

Ideal for commuters, Woodberry Park is situated within walking distance of Manor House underground station where the Piccadilly line runs to Finsbury Park in 2 minutes and Kings Cross St Pancras in 10 minutes. Alternatively, frequent flyers can take advantage of direct trains to Heathrow. Meanwhile, the Olympic site and designer heaven at the future Westfield shopping centre in Stratford is just a short 18-minute journey.

Prices start from as little as £57,500 for a 25% share in a one-bedroom apartment based on a full market value of £230,000.

Come together

HUNDREDS of people flocked to Hackney Marshes Open Day which featured fun and sport for all the family on 10 September.

Runners of all ages took part in races including the One2Go Lee Valley Marathon, and the Kids Olympic Rings Relay.

Former Coronation Street actress, Tracy Brabin also joined in a 10k race. Howard Clark, 40, who came from Portsmouth to take part in the marathon, said: "It was my first time running around here, I enjoyed it, it's quite a place – to take in an Olympic Park along the way was quite a treat."

All the participants were given a medal and a goody bag by the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Susan Fajana Thomas.

Football teams from across East London came together on the day before "The day gave everyone a chance to get involved in sport and other activities and have some fun"

the 10th anniversary of the 9/11 terror attacks in New York to play in the Eid Cup, which was set up in 2007 to bring communities together and promote peace. Sab Bham, from organisers Salaam Peace, said: "The 9/11 anniversary made it more significant. The community can work together, not just Muslims, but the wider community across Hackney, Newham and Waltham Forest, with support from the police, the Army, GLL and Hackney, and it's good to showcase that."

Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, Cllr Jonathan McShane, who presented the winning teams with their medals, said: "Hackney Marshes Open Day is a great example of what happens when a community comes together. The day gave everyone a chance to get involved in sport and other activities and have some fun. With the Olympics in under a year, it was a great opportunity to showcase the wonderful new sports facilities at Hackney Marshes."

Other entertainment included local bands and singers, aerobics, Brazilian dance, cheerleading, massage, hula hooping and children's activities.

There was also an opportunity to contribute to an Olympic skyline mural and to look around the new Hackney Marshes Centre at South Marsh, which opened this spring.

It provides 30 changing rooms as well as educational and community facilities. A new café and terrace with views across the Marshes will open later this year.

Hackney Marshes is owned by the Council and managed by social enterprise GLL, which manages the borough's leisure centres.

The open day was organised by One2Go and supported by the Council and GLL. To see a film of the event go to: www.facebook.com/YNUKtv

Tech and the City

THERE are nearly 1,000 creative and digital businesses in Shoreditch, Dalston, and Hackney Wick – an area now being hailed as 'Tech City'.

These home-grown businesses are carving a name for themselves in fields ranging from design and advertising, to digital games and mobile phone app development.

It is an arts-led economy that has grown over the past 20 years, beginning with an influx of artists and designers into Shoreditch making use of affordable workspace and the City's good internet access.

Hackney Council is working with the Government to support new businesses moving to the area by providing practical help with orientation tours, finding premises and planning advice, as well as linking up companies and investors through the development of business associations and events.

An apprenticeship and work placement scheme is also being developed by companies to ensure local young people get an opportunity to join the industry.

The Council is helping to set up visits to borough schools and Hackney

Community College by Tech City representatives, so young people can learn how to run their own digital business and consider a career in the creative sector.

The Tech City area stretches from Shoreditch to Dalston, and on to Hackney Wick where more than 600 creative businesses are based next to the Olympic Park.

The Council is pressing for the media centres in the Olympic Park to become a centre for these creative digital industries after Games time.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012

Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "Hackney's creative businesses are some of the most innovative in the world, and we are working to ensure that they are centre stage within the national and global economy alongside attracting investment into our borough and our wider community."

"The Council is taking a lead in the Tech City project to help ensure residents and businesses can be part of and prosper from this exciting and evolving industry."

Going for gold

This year's Personal Bests athletics finals hit the Marshes with schoolchildren from across the borough looking to beat their own records

MORE than 300 children from 19 primary schools returned to Hackney Marshes this month for a re-run of the Personal Bests athletics finals, which were halted by torrential rain on 7 July.

The finals gave pupils the chance to compete at borough level

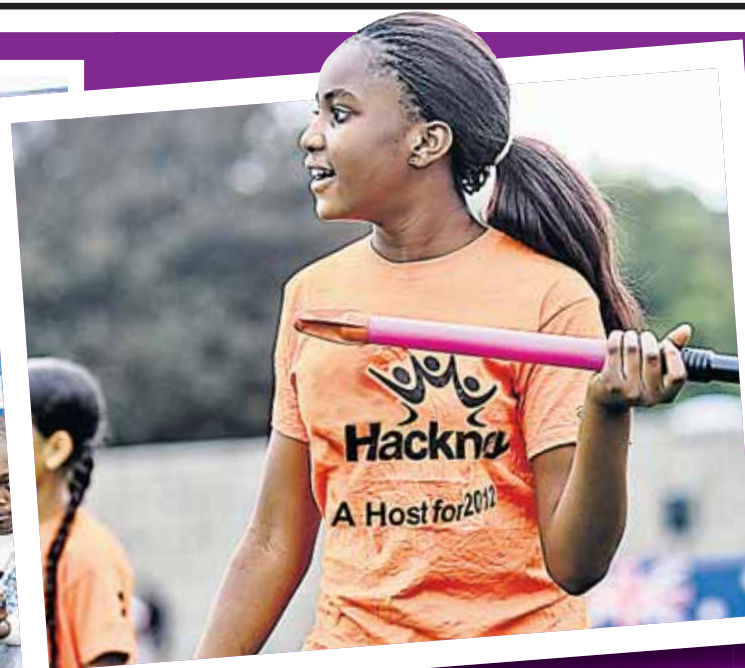

“The children really look forward to the finals and many have achieved personal bests today” to see which team produced the most personal bests in six sports: shot put, discus, javelin, triple jump, long jump, speed bounce and relays. This year the winning school was St Matthias primary, with Holmleigh coming second, and Our Lady and St Joseph's third. Carolyn Conway, PE teacher at Northwold primary, Stoke Newington, said: “We’ve been taking part in Personal Bests for four years and before that there was no athletics training in primary schools. Now, thanks to the programme, we’ve got the equipment and we’ve got the coaches. The children really look forward to the finals and many have today achieved personal bests.” Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, speaking after announcing the results, said: "Congratulations to all of you who have been running, jumping and throwing. Between you, you have achieved 1,110 personal bests."

Handing out the winners' medals, Hackney's 2012 ambassador, Paralympic swimmer Dervis Konuralp, added: "It shows that you've been putting in the practice. Whatever you aim to be the best of, you have to practice to get results. Roll on next year; it's going to be bigger and better."

Helping out at the event were 28 young sports leadership students from Winchester. Their supervisor, Chris Peach, said: "It's a repayment to Hackney for their help in setting up Personal Bests in Winchester. Next year, we're aiming to get 2,000 children involved."

Film-maker on song

Film-maker Jamie Jones's short documentary 'The Birdcage' landed the Lower Clapton resident the Film London 90 Second Challenge prize

KARAOKE enthusiasts have long known the spirituality found in banging out a good power ballad.

Spotting storytelling potential, Lower Clapton resident Jamie Jones had the idea to create a short documentary based around amateur singstars at Columbia Road boozers 'The Birdcage'.

Three local people were documented preparing for an unknown event, with the reveal at end of the film being their star turn on stage. Stripping out all dialogue, the finished product is beautifully shot, bright, uplifting and documents overlooked slices of East London life.

"One inspiration for 'The Birdcage' came from a man who isn't in the film

– he's deaf yet still loves to sing. Even though he's not in tune, his attitude on stage and the crowd that watch him is amazing. He's happy being there even though he can't hear anything," says Jamie.

"So I wanted to make something different to that usual stereotype of dark, depressing inner city London. It's looking at lives of real people; they're not all affluent, some live in high-rise tower blocks, but you can't overstate the power and freeness they feel when performing," he adds.

Hackney selected Jamie's film as the borough's entry into the 'Film London in 90 Seconds – Capital Tales' competition earlier in the year, and on 7 September the 34-year-old was crowned overall winner. Despite a successful TV background – Jamie went to film school in Swansea and has directed shows from The X Factor to hard-hitting documentaries for the BBC – he admits his surprise at being named the Hackney finalist, never mind winning the London-wide contest.

"I know a lot of talented film-makers in Hackney; there was a lot of stiff competition and all the finalists were brilliant," says Jamie.

"At the final, I was really nervous because I didn't want to freeze up or go the other way and come across as arrogant," he adds.

Although he wasn't totally unprepared.

While hobnobbing with established film industry names, he was ready to whip out from his top pocket a rolled up screenplay when a Film London patron asked him about his next big project.

For Jamie, film in Hackney is huge. He speaks proudly of the many local people he works with, including physiotherapists and bankers, who, while having no technical background, have cinematic knowledge that sometimes outstrips his own.

He says: "The Birdcage was my most successful film, but was also the least stressful. The scenery, the set and the story were all already there. At the same time it wasn't really a documentary either,

I still needed to direct real people in their own lives – re-shooting scenes, getting them to do something again.

"Someone asked me if I am representing true life, they said 'nothing is real, you're watching what the director wants you to watch'. But I think that with everything, they're all just viewpoints. Maybe blurring the boundaries – using film techniques to show real-life experiences is being more honest because you're clearly saying this is what I think."

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I live in a flat above a restaurant. In the house I used to live in I could recycle from home. Now I have to walk to my local recycling bank. Why can't people in flats above shops have their recycling collected too?

A: The Council is aware that Hackney's current range of recycling services do not meet the needs of residents living in flats above shops, and other properties, along the borough's main roads that don't have outdoor space to store recycling.

The recycling team has been working hard to look at how it can better serve these properties, and will shortly undertake a trial to provide approximately 1,000 flats above shops with a doorstep collection service.

Residents will be given a roll of sacks for recycling including paper, cardboard, plastic bottles, cans and glass jars. These can be left outside for collection at specified times during the week. If successful it is hoped this scheme can be rolled out to more locations.

On your bike

Hackney Council offers free one-to-one advice sessions and training for cyclists of all abilities and ages

AS cycling becomes ever more popular in the borough, people are being urged to take advantage of a free training scheme.

The Council offers a variety of support from one-to-one sessions for complete beginners to group sessions.

The skills learnt include balancing a bike; gaining confidence to start riding on the road; troubleshooting bad habits for experienced cyclists; riding on the road with your children. There is also the chance to take part in all ability cycling clubs.

Young people who may be starting a new job, or moving to a new school or college, could particularly benefit from one-to-one tailored advice from a professional instructor who will go through the best routes and techniques with them.

Leyla Tenvere, 17, has been able to ride a bike since she was a small child, but still managed to gain useful tips and advice to boost her cycling skills and confidence at a group cycle training session.

She said: "It was really enjoyable and we were able to pick up lots of useful information about things like bike maintenance and stopping safely in an emergency. I'd recommend the training to anyone that rides a bike."

The Council also offers specialist cycle training courses for HGV drivers so they can experience using the roads on a bike.

Anyone who lives, works or studies in Hackney is eligible for the free training.

Cycling is a popular method of transport in Hackney, not only for its health benefits but because it's also faster and cheaper than many other options.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for

Neighbourhoods, said: "Our cycle training gives everyone the opportunity to build confidence to safely enjoy the excellent cycle routes in Hackney. I'd encourage anyone thinking about riding a bike, or wanting to develop their cycling skills, to take up the free training on offer all year round."

Help give a bird or bat a home

A BIRD and bat box-making event at Springfield Park on 4 September proved popular with residents.

Young and old came to help put together kits to provide homes for a range of wildlife.

Volunteers made six bird boxes and two bat boxes at the free session, organised by the Council and London Wildlife Trust.

There are now fewer and fewer natural nesting and roosting spaces available in an urban environment like Hackney's, which is undergoing significant regeneration and development.

So small scale projects like this help create a safe haven for the borough's wildlife. The workshop also contributed to meeting a target in the Council's Biodiversity Action Plan of putting up 100 nest boxes and 50 bat boxes in the borough's parks over the next five years.

Springfield Park is one of two Local Nature Reserves in Hackney, the other is Abney Park.

This means both areas are deemed to be the most valuable for wildlife in the borough, they have statutory protection, and people are encouraged to learn about and enjoy wildlife there.

Eating off the land

HACKNEY'S community food-growing projects invited people in to see how their garden grows.

Some of the borough's most innovative green schemes took part in the Capital Growth Edible Open Gardens Day on 3 September. The London-wide event saw 50 community gardens open their doors to the public, with helpers on hand to run talks, tutorials, barbecues and even bike tours.

Dalston Eastern Curve was one local garden that showcased its space. Visitors heard about food-growing at the E8 site – which this year includes beans, courgettes, cucumbers, squash, pumpkin, tomatoes and herbs. A clay oven was fired up for pizzas, with fresh mint tea and chocolate mint plants on offer.

There were also advice on how to get involved by becoming a gardening volunteer.

Other participating spaces included Cordwainer Gardens, E8, The Floating Allotment, N1, and Wenlock herb garden, N1.

Rosie Boycott, chair of London Food, said: "This is a great way of showing people that if you want to grow your own, there are alternatives to joining huge waiting lists for sought after allotments."

News in brief

How to cut your energy bill

HOUSEHOLDERS can take action to combat dramatic gas and electricity price increases, by adopting a few energy saving measures.

The Council's has set up an Energy Advice Line after British Gas announced plans to increase residential gas and electricity bills by another 17 per cent, just eight months after it raised its prices by seven per cent. This will add about £70 to the average annual dual fuel bill, which will increase from £1,010 to £1,180. But by getting expert advice from the Energy Advice Line householders could save up to £200 a year in energy bills. Simple measures such as fitting radiator panels, insulating your loft and walls, draught proofing and putting in a more efficient heating system can help homes offset the latest energy price hikes. Other measures such as switching computers, televisions and videos off standby, or not leaving lights on unnecessarily, can save money by cutting down on electricity and will reduce carbon dioxide emissions to help the environment at the same time.

For free independent advice and information contact the Energy Advice Team on: 0800 281 768; or e-mail: energy.advice@hackney.gov.uk.

PREVIEW

Hackney Wick Voices

Until 4 Feb 2012, Hackney Museum, 1 Reading Lane, E8 1GQ

New exhibition Hackney Wick Voices explores the past and present of the area, as seen through the eyes of residents.

The Council-run show compares the history of this corner of the capital to the new changes and developments brought about by London 2012. Photographs are provided by Hackney Archives, the Olympic Delivery Authority and Eton Manor Boys Club archive at Bishopsgate Institute; interviews with 12 long-time residents are also featured. Remembering her formative years, Hackney-born Joan Elliot said: "All the children in the street played together and we spent all our summer holidays on the Marshes and Mabley Green. My mum used to bring egg and chips and we'd sit under a tent and eat it and then she'd come back in the afternoon with a bottle of tea and some bread and jam and we'd play till about five, half past. And that was our summer."

The exhibition is part of Mapping the Change series.

PREVIEW*Alphaville 2011*22-25 September, Various locations

WE are all digital. Or at least this is what the organisers of a London-wide festival of digital culture claim. This year's 'Alphaville' features a variety of mix-media exhibitions, symposiums and live performances all inspired by the idea of a transition from the digital era. The festival theme is 'from digital to post digital', but the event is not just about the future of technology.

'I am interested in looking beneath the technology itself at how we communicate with other human beings and how that is changing as a result of social networking,' says Man Bartlett, a new media artist whose work features in Alphaville.

By creating spaces where the digital and the analogue intersect with culture, participants like Bartlett will explore the effects of digitalisation on art, society and human behaviour itself. Visit www.alpha-ville.co.uk

PREVIEW

The Black Chronicles

Until 21 October, Magnum Print Room, 63 Gee St, EC1V 3RS

SET of works The Black Chronicles brings together four photographers who have documented the lives of black cultural movements around the world. The exhibition asks visitors to pick apart ideologies of the photographers, subjects and eras. Wayne Miller produced an in-depth documentation of black US life in Chicago during the late 1940s. They capture some of the economic realities of the immediate post-war era as well as intimate moments in the daily lives of ordinary people. British photographer George Rodger produced portraits charting the arrival of Caribbean migrant families at Waterloo station in 1964. During the 1960s and 1970s Ian Berry photographs revealed an increasingly diverse British society, including two black male nurses tending to an elderly white gentleman and a dancing interracial couple, seemingly caught off guard. Lastly, Chris Steele-Perkins' portfolio includes intimate portraits in 1970s Brixton and a documentary series on Wolverhampton's dancehall and disco club scene in 1978. Nightingale primary pupils compete in a race with sprinter Oscar Pistorius (far right) in Trafalgar Square, as Prime Minister David Cameron looks on (far left)

PUPILS from Nightingale Primary School met the biggest names in disability sport at the London 2012 Paralympic ticket sales launch.

South African sprinter and Paralympic superstar, Oscar Pistorius, who was the first disabled runner to compete in a 400m semi-final at the World Athletic Championships in Daegu last month, took part in a fun race with Hackney schoolchildren.

He was among a host of Paralympic stars, including Team GB swimmer Ellie Simmonds, to showcase sports that will feature in next year's Games, at the Trafalgar Square launch on 8 September. The pupils were also filmed for a Channel Four programme and watched a tennis match between Prime Minister David Cameron and Mayor of London Boris Johnson.

Aamera Badat, who was interviewed by Channel 4 News, said: "I think the Paralympics are very important for disabled people because they can participate in sports just like non-disabled people."

The event was a warm up for Londoners, who in under a year will see around 4,200 Paralympians compete across 20 sports.

Childcare fees advice

PARENTS needing advice on childcare fees are being directed to a free booklet produced by The Learning Trust.

'Help For Paying With Childcare Costs' has information on tax credits, free part-time nursery places, and schemes for families with children with special needs.

It was launched on 7 September, the same day that a national survey by Save The Children and the Daycare Trust found that thousands of parents in the UK are struggling to pay childcare costs, with some spending more than a third of their income on it.

Deirdre MacGinley, Hackney Family Information Service Manager at the trust, said: "Paying for childcare is tough for parents, so we've produced a booklet that shows parents what financial help is available. Not all families will be able to get help, but it's important to check if yours can."

Picking up a copy at the launch, Darrah, mother of nine-month-old Sian, said: "I'm just about to go back to work after having a baby, so it's great to be able to find out what support is available to me."

The Family Information Service helps parents of children and young people, aged up to 19, who are looking for information on childcare, education, things to do and family support.

Student set to showcase work on fashion week catwalk

A LOCAL student is about to see her designs modelled on a London Fashion Week catwalk. Shaunette Vincent (right), 17, of Our Lady's Convent High School, has made it to the finals of the 2011 FAD Junior Awards, a contest offering young people an early break into the fashion industry.

She was selected from 100 16 to 19-year-olds who took part in FAD's Fashion Futures 2 project, a 10-week course targeted at young people from inner city areas in London and Manchester.

As a finalist, Shaunette took part in five days of workshops at the University of East London this summer, designing and crafting her collection. The young hopeful is set to present designs inspired by the V&A Museum's ceramics, glass and jewellery galleries at the catwalk final on 20

September in Covent Garden. The winner will get a placement with a leading industry company. Shaunette said: "I think it's just the accomplishment of knowing that I've got this far and knowing that I actually can do it. I think if you just believe in yourself, that your determination can get you there. "Since I started coming to FAD, I feel like I've had a lot more opportunities, a lot more stuff for my portfolio. It's been really helpful."

YH!World needs you!

Scenes from Discover Young Hackney 2009

By Simone Barclay, 23

YH!WORLD is recruiting young creatives to work on next year's Discover Young Hackney (DYH) festival.

If you want to get into the media, this is a stellar opportunity for you. The borough's annual creative festival needs budding media moguls to join their board.

You will be involved in major decisions regarding the advertising and communications plan for next year's event. You'll also be working with YH!World, a youth-led website which uncovers and shares the best of London's opportunities while helping young people get work in the media industries.

You don't need to have any experience, but you do need to have ideas and be able to commit to at least seven of 10 planning sessions between now and February. You'll be asked to help promote the festival in your school, meet industry professionals, and work with local youth media groups.

You will help choose the message and design for DYH 2012 and have a say on how the marketing budget is spent; be given a media mentor; develop new skills; have one-to-one help to develop your CV or portfolio; and get three visits to creative businesses including Europe's largest magazine publisher, IPC Media.

To apply, submit your CV and a supporting statement written by someone who knows you, which states if your skills are in: images, strategy, words or promotion. Remember, if you blog, tweet, take photos or video, include that in your CV. There are eight places on the DYH board up for grabs, and the deadline for applications is 23 September. E-mail: lucy@yhworld.co.uk

Didn't get into uni? Why not take a gap year?

By Elizabeth Harris, 24

DIDN'T get the A-level results you wanted? Why not take a year out? You've plenty of options.

This could be a great opportunity to have the best year of your life. You were psyched up for uni, but it'll still be there next year, and the year after in fact. So why not take some time to have fun, make some money, and get a bit of life experience? The opportunities are endless:

Get involved – volunteer

Make a difference to your local community, meet new people and gain work experience while doing something that looks great on a CV. The range of volunteering options is massive, and there's something for everyone. It's up to you, volunteer in a role that is linked to the career you want, or try something completely different. Check the Do-it or Volunteering England websites for more information and to find opportunities.

Work and save

With university fees and the cost of living rising, going to university next year is going to be more expensive – fact. But by saving up a bit of dosh to take with you, you won't have to live off beans on toast and only go out on pound-a-pint nights. You'll also reduce the debt you'll have to pay back when you finish your course. And again, work experience always looks good on a CV.

See the world

Before you cry 'I don't have the money to go travelling', anyone can get out of the UK – working your way around the world is a great option. Think about it: you can get paid to ski in the French Alps by working in a chalet for the winter season, or spend the summer working on a Greek island. Check the Natives, Anywork Anywhere or Season Workers websites for more info. If you don't feel like working abroad, get a job for a few months, save up and go off and see the world. There are hundreds of websites dedicated to travelling or volunteering abroad.

Q&A with Ms Dynamite

By Stream Conyer, 14

1. How was performing at Underage Festival in Victoria Park last month? Great! I love performing and I think music is so inspiring and empowering, especially to young people. There should be more events and facilities available where young people can experience live music to its fullest.

2. Were there any bands that you particularly liked?

I liked absolutely everyone, didn't get to catch as much as I'd have liked to, but caught a glimpse of some amazing dancers.

3. Are 13 to 17-year-old crowds better than older crowds?

I wouldn't say better, but I would definitely define it as different. There are pros and cons about both older and younger crowds.

4. If you got another chance, would you perform at Underage again? Definitely!

5. Being a role model for young people, what message do you have for them?

I wouldn't define myself as a role model, but I believe my life's message to any and everyone is simply about striving for the happiness of ourselves and of one another...

This page...

has been compiled with help from staff and volunteers at YH!World – a social enterprise that produces a website full of info about events, courses, and general happenings in Hackney.

Changes to dementia services

The NHS has organised a meeting for residents to voice opinions on the borough's approach to dementia on 26 September

NHS East London and the City wants residents' views on proposals to change services for people with dementia in Hackney.

The aim is to put more resources into being able to support people in the comfort of their own homes, rather than a hospital ward.

To achieve this, the primary care trust is proposing to close under-used in-patient wards in Hackney and other parts of East London and, instead, provide services from a single base at Mile End Hospital, in Tower Hamlets, freeing up funds in the process. There will be no change to in-patient services for people with complex advanced dementia who need a longer stay however.

A meeting has been organised for residents to find out more on 26 September, 1-3pm, at Hackney Museum, 1 Reading Lane, E8.

Marie Gabriel, Chair of NHS East London and the City, said: "Many people with dementia are now assessed early, diagnosed and then receive specialist support at home, rather than having to go to hospital. We want to continue to develop more modern and efficient services for people with dementia.

"People with dementia and their carers have told us they prefer to receive care and support out of hospital, and that being supported to live at home improves their mental health and wellbeing.

"We need people who use these services – carers, local people, NHS staff, community organisations – and other organisations with an interest in these services, to tell us what they think of the proposals."

The consultation, 'Older People, Modern Services', will run until 30 November.

Carers centre given £110k

CITY and Hackney Carers Centre has received a £110,000 grant from a trust that dates back to medieval times.

The cheque was presented to staff at the charity's Annual General Meeting (AGM) on 6 September by City Bridge Trust. The centre in Tyssen Street, Dalston, supports carers with an advice service on a weekly session or drop-in basis, as well as home visits to give emotional and practical assistance. The project aims to identify and support 50 additional older carers each year.

More than 70 guests attended the AGM, which saw food and giant-sized games on offer for carers needing a respite from their daily routine. Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Susan Fajana-Thomas, took the opportunity to officially announce that the centre is one of the nominated charities she will fund-raise for during her year in office. She said: "I'm hoping to raise as much as possible for such a good cause. I am also actively trying to raise the profile of the organisation by making people aware of the good service it provides."

The centre is run by staff who speak several different languages including Bengali, Urdu, and Turkish to represent the borough's diversity.

Homerton hospital opens its doors to more volunteers

HOMERTON hospital is calling for more people to apply for its volunteering scheme.

Residents have until 3 October to sign up to the Homerton Helpers project and to take on roles such as directing visitors and assisting at mealtimes on the wards.

Dawn White, the volunteer project lead, said: "It's been fantastic to see people of all ages and all sections of the community wanting to get involved. In our first recruitment drive, we had over 700 enquiries and have placed 100 volunteers across the hospital.

"Everybody has been impressed by the commitment of our Homerton Helpers team. We know from patient feedback what a difference they're already making to people's time with us. We have now begun our new recruitment drive and welcome interest from potential volunteers."

Health experts launch advice sessions

A PANEL of health experts are set to hold advice sessions across the borough to help people suffering from incontinence problems.

Homerton hospital's continence team – made up of physiotherapists and nurses – will be handing out information on the types and availability of treatments, exercises, products and medicines as well as face-to-face information.

Nearly 14million people in the UK experience problems with bladder control and 6.5million have bowel problems. One in 12 children in the UK struggles with bedwetting, daytime wetting, constipation and soiling.

The team will be in the Matthew Duncan seminar room, Homerton hospital, on 20 September, 2-4pm; John Scott Health Centre, Manor House, on 21 September, 1-3pm; and at the front entrance of Homerton hospital on 23 September, 10am-2pm. The advice days form part of Continence Awareness Week (19-23 September).

Nursing heroine

IMPROVEMENTS at Shoreditch Workhouse as a result of the 1867 Metropolitan Poor Act led to the creation of a separate infirmary and new dispensary.

Opened in 1872, there were 503 beds for 203 men, 268 women and 32 children. An infirmary matron was appointed for the first time, as well as a house superintendent, who worked separately from the workhouse matron and master.

In 1903, Edith Cavell joined as Assistant Matron at the Infirmary, becoming known as a dignified, gentle and highly esteemed member of staff. She went to Brussels in 1906, to become principal of a nursing school, and later looked after many of the thousands of Allied soldiers wounded during the First World War as the German army advanced through Belgium.

Cavell also helped some of the soldiers she nursed back to health escape behind Allied lines, and saved hundreds of men before the underground organisation she was working with was discovered in August 1915. Its members stood trial in October. Eight were acquitted, but two, including Cavell, were found guilty and sentenced to death.

At dawn on 15 October 1915, she faced the German firing squad. On the eve of her execution, Cavell spoke to the British chaplain at the gaol, and stated: "I have no fear or shrinking; I have seen death so often it is not strange, or fearful to me ... This I would say, standing as I do in view of God and eternity! I realise that patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness towards anyone."

A carved plaque in Cavell's memory was later hung in the nurses' dining room at the Shoreditch Infirmary, which by 1920 became known as St Leonard's Hospital, and the Workhouse as St Leonard's House.

The London County Council took over both institutions in 1930, closing the workhouse and transforming its buildings into a place to care for the chronically ill, while St Leonard's became a General Hospital for the area.

In 1934, it was decided that most of the ward blocks needed to be replaced, but the outbreak of the Second World War in 1939 prevented this. The first bombs of the Blitz fell on Shoreditch in August 1940, and it is likely that St Leonard's was the first hospital to receive air-raid casualties.

It was badly damaged in April 1941, when a large bomb hit an underground shelter in nearby Nuttall Street, blowing out all the windows and causing the ceilings to collapse. One of the nurses' homes and a ward block subsequently had to be demolished, but there were no casualties as the buildings were empty because admissions had been limited to urgent cases since September 1939.

After the war, improvement works were undertaken and St Leonard's became part of the NHS, with the two sections of the institution united as one general hospital. By 1966, there were 192 beds available, increasing to 207 by 1979. But in 1984, the in-patient wards were closed.

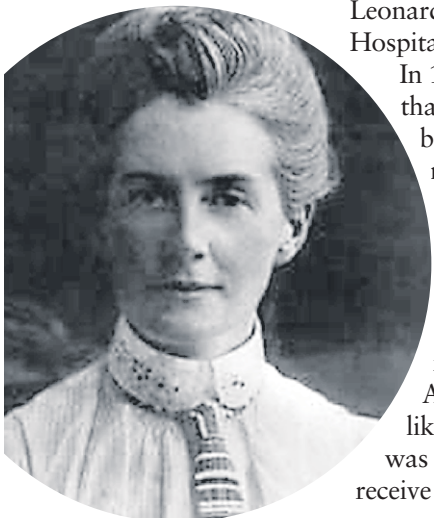

No longer a general hospital, St Leonard's Health Centre instead developed as a primary care centre, co-ordinating a number of community services across Hackney.

The workhouse has been replaced by the Mary Seacole Nursing Home, but some of the old infirmary buildings still remain as part of the health centre. The site is currently being redeveloped into a Primary Care Resources Centre and much will be demolished, though the historic façade on Kingsland Road will remain as a reminder of St Leonard's long heritage as a healthcare provider for the area.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Trainee commis chef, Thomas Andrews, this week shares a seasonal and exciting seafood recipe.

He said: "I've cooked this at the restaurant a few times using some amazing Isle of Man scallops – they're so juicy – truly the very best of British.

"It's also a great recipe for seasonal vegetables. The rainbow chard I've used in this dish is popping up in a whole range of specials, so do pop by and try one."

Seafood stir fry

Serves 4

Preparation time
20 mins

Cooking time
10 mins

Ingredients

- 1 pepper sliced
- 1 carrot sliced
- 1 handful baby sweetcorn
- 1 generous handful of beansprouts
- 1 handful green beans
- 1 packet egg noodles
- 3 chard leaves sliced into 1cm strips
- 4 scallops
- 1 tube squid cleaned and cut into half cm slices. As an alternative use 400g mussels (steam them first and then remove to use)

Oyster sauce mix:

- 2 tbsp oyster sauce, 1 tbsp fish sauce, 1 chilli chopped, 30ml water or veg stock

Chilli oil:

- 1 shallot sliced, 2 garlic cloves sliced, half a cup of sesame oil, 50g piece of ginger, chopped, 1 chilli. All blitzed in a blender

Method

- Cook noodles in a pan of water and reserve
- Fry your chosen seafood in a wok with a generous splash of chilli oil mix for 2-3 mins
- Add sliced veg (except for the chard and beansprouts) and toss in the oil for another 2 mins. Keep tossing the vegetables
- Add noodles and oyster sauce mix
- Add beansprouts and chopped chard
- With your final ingredients now piping hot, give your pan a final toss, taste and serve.

Waterhouse is a social enterprise that trains local people in the ethos of eco-friendly best practice in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, its profits go back into a regeneration programme for the local area. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is now open six days a week.

Tues to Fri: lunch – 12noon to 4pm;
dinner – 6pm to 10pm
Sat: dinner – 6pm to 10pm
Sun: lunch – 12noon to 4pm

Shaping the future of Hackney's libraries

THE Council recently asked residents what they thought of its plans for the future of the borough's eight libraries.

Hackney had proposed changes to opening hours, with some, including a new library in Dalston opening earlier, others an hour later, plus some closing earlier on Fridays.

More than 700 responses were received during the 12-week consultation. All the feedback has now been collated and analysed.

As a result, the Council decided that Stamford Hill, Hackney Central and the new Dalston C.L.R. James libraries will open 9am-8pm, Mon to Thurs; 9am-6pm, Fri; and 9am-5pm, Sat.

Stoke Newington and Shoreditch libraries will open from 10am-8pm, Mon to Thurs; 10am-6pm, Fri; and 10am-5pm, Sat.

Clapton and Homerton libraries will open from 10am-8pm, Mon, Tues, and Thurs; 1pm-6pm, Wed; 10am-6pm, Fri; and 10am-5pm, Sat.

Woodberry Down will continue to open at 9.30am, but will also now open over the lunch hour.

Dalston C.L.R. James, Stoke Newington and Stamford Hill libraries will also open on Sundays from 1pm-5pm.

The opening times at Hackney Archives are also set to be extended by five hours each week later this year.

As the consultation showed support for using volunteers in the borough's libraries, that idea is to be investigated further. Volunteers will not take the place of paid staff however.

The consultation also asked people's opinions about events at local libraries. Following feedback, it was decided to hold a reduced number of events in all the borough's libraries, with the busiest hosting the most events.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "The Council will continue to offer some of the longest library opening hours in the country, despite having to make savings."
